We don’t often associate love with the practice of democracy or with teaching and learning in our schools. Rud will discuss how he believes love is central to democracy and to education. He will discuss the work of America’s foremost philosopher of education, John Dewey and explore how Dewey developed these ideas. Rud will then use Dewey’s insights to comment upon current educational initiatives and practices.