SPECIAL COLLECTIONS/UNIVERSITY ARCHIVES

NOTES TO USERS

Special Collections/University Archives materials require special housing and handling because of their value, rarity, condition or format. The collections are kept in an area with appropriate environmental and security controls. They will be brought to the reading room, open 1-4 p.m. Monday-Friday, where the following rules apply:

1. Materials may be used only in the reading room.
2. Users are asked to present an identification card which will be kept until materials are returned.
3. For careful handling: use only pencils; neither add nor erase markings; keep note-taking paper at a distance; avoid wetting fingers and bending or riffling pages; firmly support the spine of a volume; handle photographs or loose sheets by their edges; maintain the exact order of manuscript materials.
4. Library staff will fill "fair use" photocopy requests as time allows if condition of the materials, copyright, and donor restrictions permit. Permission to reproduce material does not constitute permission to publish. It is the responsibility of the reader to obtain permission from copyright holders to publish from many manuscript or printed works. A copy of this written permission from writers or their estates must be submitted to the Bertrand Library. To facilitate this process, the Library will endeavor to maintain a file of the holders of copyright for its manuscript collections. The requirement for written permission is a protection for both the reader and the library.

I have read the notes to users, agree to abide by the regulations, and understand that I bear full responsibility for my use of published or manuscript sources.
