APPLICATION PROCEDURE
Application forms are available on the Office of International Education website. To obtain full access to the application you must meet or communicate with a study abroad advisor first. In order to increase your chance of obtaining a space in the program, please apply as soon as possible. Applications are due by September 12, 2013. Should spaces remain, rolling admissions may be available.

All applications should be submitted to the Office of International Education. Criteria for eligibility include minimum GPA of 2.8, junior or senior status during the program semester, recommendation of the program directors, and a record of good conduct. If you do not have a 2.8 GPA you may discuss your grades with the faculty directors to determine eligibility.

See International Education in the Bucknell catalog for further information. Confirmation of participation will be due two weeks after acceptance.

INFORMATION SESSIONS
Please attend one of the following sessions:

- Thursday, August 29, 2013  12:10 – 12:50 p.m.
- Wednesday, September 4, 2013  5:30 – 6 p.m.
- Monday, September 9, 2013  6 – 6:30 p.m.

All sessions will be held in the LANG 217 Conference Room.

Information can also be obtained by contacting:
Professor Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion  15 Coleman Hall, (570) 577-3180  bwg003@bucknell.edu
Jennifer Fritz, Assistant Director  Office of International Education  105 Taylor Hall  570-577-3743 or jef025@bucknell.edu

Office of International Education  (570) 577-3796 or intled@bucknell.edu

Bucknell in London website: www.bucknell.edu/inLondon

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?
This program is open to all Bucknell students. It will be particularly attractive to program to appeal to students interested in religious studies, history, politics, economics, sociology, and the arts.

BUCKNELL FACULTY
Brantley W. Gasaway  Department of Religion
Professor Gasaway’s primary areas of research are religion and politics, religion and social change, and American evangelicalism. He teaches courses in American religious history, religion and politics, religion and law, and religion and popular culture. His current book project analyzes the history and political theology of contemporary progressive evangelical Christians.
Some of my most memorable experiences are of just doing everyday things like going to the grocery store, post office or riding the bus, because I felt like I was a Londoner, immersing myself in British culture.

CORE COURSE (REQUIRED)

Global Religions and the Politics of Pluralism – RELI 224 (Gasaway) 1 credit

In this interdisciplinary course, we will explore the presence and practice of global religions in London and analyze the cultural and political challenges of religious pluralism. London is perhaps the most religiously diverse city in the world. As a result, it offers a unique context for learning about a wide variety of religious traditions, assessing how minority religions negotiate issues of acculturation, and evaluating the political problems often created by religious diversity. This course will combine classroom lectures and discussions with visits to places of worship within London, historical sites throughout Great Britain, and several other European cities.

ELECTIVE COURSES

History of London – HIST 247 (Adjunct) 1 credit

In this course, students will explore London’s rich history as the center of Britain’s political, cultural, and economic life, spanning from Roman Britain, through the Great Fire, the rise of the British Empire, to the Blitz, and on to contemporary multicultural London. This course will make full use of London’s own resources and will include many site visits across the city as an integral part of the course.

Theatre in London – THEA 264/ENGL 217 (Co-listed as Studies in Dramatic Literature) (Adjunct) 1 credit

This course on one of the highlights of London’s cultural life introduces students to all aspects of the London theater. Students will read several plays that will complement the seminar focus. Students will gain familiarity with the various aspects of production from staging, through designing sets, props, costumes, lighting and special effects, to acting. Also included are “backstage” visits to Shakespeare’s Globe and the National Theatre. Students will see one play each week, keep a journal of the plays attended, and complete a theater project that integrates aspects of their study and fieldwork in London.

Art and Architecture in London – ART 215 (Adjunct) 1 credit

This course provides a background and context through which to view changes in British art, architecture and design from ancient to medieval, to modern. It will illustrate how technical, social, cultural and political developments are reflected in the practice and content of the arts. Each class session begins with a historical background/overview briefing with selected slides, followed by a walking tour of a museum, historical areas, or nearby sites.

Political Economy of European Integration – ECON 222/POLS 290 (Adjunct) 1 credit

This course introduces students to the main political economy issues of European Integration. The course analyzes the history, evolution and institutions of European integration relevant for understanding economic policies. The course will enable students to apply and relate conceptual and theoretical knowledge that underpins the course to the real economic and political processes of European integration. The course draws on a range of readings dealing with the core issues and theories, and in so doing will familiarize students with the most up to date policy discussions relating to the European Integration.

The British Political System – POLS 220 (Adjunct) 1 credit

This course looks at the structure and functioning of the British political system, and the social and constitutional context in which it operates.

Please note courses are subject to change. For additional information related to courses please contact Professor Gasaway.

ADDITIONAL OPTIONS

Independent Study – Students may arrange independent study courses (contingent on faculty participation and department chair approval).

Internships – It may be possible to arrange an internship for course credit during the London semester in place of one of the elective courses. (Note: Internships are not considered to be an integral part of the program; they cannot be guaranteed.) If students participate in an internship they will incur additional fees, including but not limited to a visa, as applicable.

FACILITIES AND FIELD TRIPS

Housing – Students will be housed in shared flats in central London, each with cooking and laundry facilities.

Instructional Facilities – Classes will be held in educational facilities located on Great Russell Street one block from the British Museum. The buildings house a library, computer laboratory, classrooms, Bucknell’s program office, and fax, mail and email facilities. Students will be able to access the Bucknell Library and other campus web and email addresses via the internet.

Field Trips – Beyond the fieldwork and aspects of “everyday” London, trips may include (but are not limited to):

- Stonehenge and Bath
- Canterbury
- Oxford and Cambridge
- Edinburgh
- Belfast

Beyond the UK, we plan to travel to the Netherlands to visit Amsterdam (and possibly The Hague).

Students are also encouraged to travel independently as time permits.

PROGRAM SPECIFICS

Program Fee (billed to the Bucknell student account):
- Bucknell tuition
- Average charge for Bucknell Gateway Single room on campus

The Program Fee covers:
- Academic Instruction
- Housing
- Transportation (including airfare): New York/London round trip and a transportation pass for central London.
- Program-related field trips and excursions, including transportation, theater tickets, and museum entry fees.

Expenses Not Covered:
- Transportation between New York City and your home
- Meals
- Books
- Independent travel
- Personal expenses